Pagos del Moncayo, D.O. Campo de Borja

- The people of Pagos de Moncayo take great pride in the centuries of experience and tradition they owe to the cultivation of Garnacha.
- Although Bodegas Pagos de Moncayo is a young Bodega, six years old, it works only with vines in excess of 80 years old.
- These vines and vineyards are family owned by father and son for many, many years; the Aibar family.
- All stages of viticulture and vinification are carried out by hand maximising the expressiveness and personality of the final wines which remain totally true to their "terroir".

- Three wines have been born from these lands and this philosophy. In addition to the Garnacha there is the Syrah grape, used as a wonderful complement.
- Located in Spain's northwest province of Zaragoza, about 200 miles west of Barcelona, the Campo de Borja D.O. is close to the south of Navarra and of the Ebro River.
- Campo de Borja D.O. is an area rich in winemaking history, and is now poised to emerge as a region for quality Spanish wines in the Twenty-first Century.

- The rugged mountainous area is delimited by the snow-capped Sierra del Moncayo Mountains and the vineyard sites that line these are sited between 350 and 700 meters in elevation.
- There's an "extreme continental" climate (cold winters and hot summers with an annual maximum and minimum difference between 40° C) marked by widely contrasting day and night temperatures.
- The area's soils are poor and composed of brown, limey, calcareous, sandy limestone soil that is well-drained and porous, rich in organic matter and nutrients.
